The college prospectus, provided before the start of each academic session, outlines available courses, facilities, rules, and co-curricular activities. At the beginning of every course, teachers assess students learning levels and subject understanding. Based on this assessment, tailored support programs are designed for both advanced and slow learners. Additional and remedial classes are arranged, and revision sessions are held for slow learners and late entrants. Under the CBCS system, students choose subjects according to their strengths and interests, and faculty offer guidance in course selection, with opportunities to change subjects if needed. Teachers remain accessible for individual doubt clarification and mentoring.

Learner-centered methods such as hands-on activities, collaborative learning, and problem-solving approaches are widely used. Group discussions, projects, field trips, seminars, and extension lectures encourage active participation. Students receive independent learning tasks like assignments and personal projects. The college provides support services through the Library, Computer Lab, Reading Room, and ICT-enabled classrooms, along with training in essential life skills.

ICT tools are extensively integrated into teaching through projectors, computers, Personal Laptops YouTube, email, WhatsApp, Telegram, Zoom, and Google Classroom. The college website supports teaching, communication, material distribution, assessments, and announcements. Wi-Fi, INFLIBNET resources, and online feedback systems further strengthen the learning environment.

1.2 Curriculum Planning and Implementation

The institution ensures effective curriculum implementation through a well-structured and documented process. As an affiliated college of Himachal Pradesh University, Shimla, it follows the curriculum prescribed by the University, and academic calendars are prepared in alignment with the University schedule. Multiple committees function to ensure smooth academic operations, and meetings are held at the beginning of each session. The first week is observed as “zero week,” during which the time-table committee prepares class schedules for all streams and plans timely syllabus completion.

The institution provides essential facilities, including ICT-enabled classrooms, internet access in the library, well-equipped laboratories, and a supportive learning environment. Teachers enrich the curriculum by integrating recent developments in their disciplines. Co-curricular activities such as seminars, quizzes, workshops, expert talks, and field visits are conducted to support academic learning. Faculty members maintain logs of lectures, assignments, and internal assessments to ensure continuous evaluation. The library offers a wide range of books, magazines, and journals.

The Head of Institution and IQAC regularly gather student feedback and monitor curriculum progress. Continuous Comprehensive Assessment (CCA), carrying 30 marks, is conducted as per University guidelines.

1.2.3 Curriculum Enrichment Practices

Curriculum Enrichment

The institution effectively incorporates crosscutting themes such as Professional Ethics, Gender, Human Values, Environment, and Sustainability into its curriculum and institutional practices. These themes are woven into both academic programs and the holistic development framework offered to students. The college ensures that issues related to environmental protection and sustainability are extensively covered through courses like Environmental Studies, Zoology, Botany, Geography, and Disaster Management. These subjects not only create awareness but also encourage students to adopt environmentally responsible behavior.

Human values are integrated into the curricula of Political Science, Commerce, and English, enabling students to develop empathy, social responsibility, and a deeper understanding of civic duties. Professional ethics is another important component embedded in English, Commerce, Computer Science, and in self-financing programs such as BCA and PGDCA. These courses help students understand workplace ethics, responsible conduct, and the importance of integrity in professional life.

Beyond academics, the institution regularly conducts workshops, seminars, and awareness programs on Gender Sensitization, Ethical Values, and Environmental Education. These activities strengthen students' understanding of social equity, gender justice, and moral responsibility. The institution's NSS units play a proactive role in translating these themes into community service. NSS volunteers participate in tree plantation drives, village sanitation campaigns, plastic-free initiatives, river-cleaning activities, and awareness rallies. They also conduct poster-making competitions and educational outreach programmes on sustainability and environmental protection.

The college actively engages in national initiatives such as the Swachh Bharat Abhiyan and Swachhta Pakhwada, reinforcing its commitment to cleanliness and public health. Through cultural events, extension activities, and outreach programmes, the institution consistently promotes ethical conduct, environmental responsibility, gender equity, and human values. This integrated approach ensures that students not only gain academic knowledge but also develop into socially conscious and ethically responsible citizens.

One Day Educational Tour Report

A one-day educational tour was organized for the students of the Geography, Commerce, and Physics Departments of Government College Reckong Peo, District Kinnaur (H.P.) to the Kashang Hydroelectric Project, located in Kinnaur. The primary objective of this tour was to provide practical exposure and firsthand understanding of hydroelectric power generation, sustainable development, and the environmental impacts associated with such large-scale infrastructure.

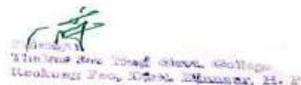

The team comprising faculty members Prof Dharam kirti ,Dr Mohit Prakesh and enthusiastic 37 students departed from the college campus in the morning and reached the project site after a scenic and informative journey. On arrival, the group was warmly welcomed by the project officials Mahesh kanga , who briefed the students about the objectives, design, and working mechanism of the Kashang Hydro Project.

During the visit, total 37 students observed the different phases of power generation—from water intake, penstock operations, turbine functioning, to electricity generation and distribution. Detailed interactions with the engineers helped students understand the interdisciplinary aspects of hydroelectric projects, including physical geography, environmental considerations, and technical innovations.

The tour proved to be highly informative, bridging the gap between theoretical knowledge and real-world applications. It also fostered interdisciplinary learning among students from diverse academic backgrounds. The visit concluded in the evening with a group discussion and feedback session, where students shared their insights and learning outcomes.

Overall, the educational tour to the Kashang Hydroelectric Project was a great success and added immense value to the academic development of the participating students.

Subject teachers evaluated assignments, and seminars were organized wherever required to enhance academic understanding. Internal Assessment and Practical marks were uploaded to the Himachal Pradesh University, Shimla-5 portal before the declaration of Term-End Examination results.

The college prepared its Academic Calendar for the 2024–25 sessions in alignment with the University's guidelines. This calendar, also included in the college prospectus, outlined all academic and co-curricular events planned for the year. Although the affiliated status allowed limited structural modifications, the college incorporated significant activities such as National and International Day celebrations, admission deadlines, PTA General Assembly, CSCA elections, sports meet, mid-term examinations, and examination form submission schedules. This calendar served as a guiding document for all stakeholders, enabling them to plan and carry out tasks efficiently throughout the academic year. 1.2.5 Prompt Communication of Assessment/Results of Students

The house exams were conducted in Dec. 2024, answer scripts were evaluated by the teaching faculty before 31st Dec. 2024, and marks obtained by students were communicated promptly through notice boards and class WhatsApp groups, assignments were evaluated before 28th Feb.2025 and CCA was prepared and uploaded in the Web portal of HPU Shimla before the commencement of annual exams, i.e.27th March 2025. The marks of CCA were also communicated to the students through notice boards and class WhatsApp groups. Prompt communication of assessment/results was made within 7 days.

1.3 Add-on Courses/Certificate courses

No admission was made during the session 2024-25.

During the academic session 2024–25, the college initiated the process to conduct the following Add-On Course as part of our efforts to promote skill development, awareness building, and value-based education:

Certificate Course in Disaster Management The course was designed to provide students with foundational knowledge of disaster preparedness, risk assessment, and basic response strategies, particularly focusing on issues relevant to the Himalayan region, which frequently experiences landslides, floods, and seismic activity. As part of the academic planning, the college issued an official notification inviting applications, detailing the course objectives, duration, intake capacity, eligibility criteria, and registration procedure. The notice was circulated through campus display boards, the college website, and student groups to ensure maximum reach. A total of 40 seats (30 subsidized and 10 non subsidized) were offered for the session.

However, despite timely notification and adequate publicity, no students enrolled in the course during the 2024–25 session. Therefore, the course could not be operationalized in that academic year. The institution nevertheless remains committed to offering this course in the upcoming session with renewed awareness efforts, considering its relevance to regional safety and community resilience.

1.4 Student Feedback (taken from students with 80% attendance)

- i. Sample size – > 25%
- ii. Students Satisfaction – 81-90 %
- iii. Action on Feedback- 61-80%

The Student Satisfaction Survey for the academic session 2024–25 was conducted by Thakur Sen Negi Government College, Reckong Peo to assess students’ experiences regarding academic guidance, teaching–learning processes, infrastructural facilities, house tests, workshops, co-curricular activities and seminars, College Library and overall institutional support. A total of 64–65 responses were received across various parameters. Feedback was collected from students across all departments through a structured questionnaire based on a 2-point rating scale (Yes, No). The responses were received through Google Form containing 13 structured questions designed to assess key areas of academic and institutional performance, ensuring participation from a majority of enrolled students with an attendance record of 80% and above. The consolidated analysis is presented below. A large majority of students (76.9%) confirmed that they were guided by teachers while selecting programmes and subjects. This reflects the supportive role of faculty in helping students choose appropriate courses at the beginning of their academic journey. Similarly, 81.5% of students stated that they were provided with additional study material besides prescribed textbooks, indicating that departments are proactively supplementing classroom learning with notes, references, and other academic resources. Student satisfaction regarding elective and generic course options was exceptionally high, with 92.3% expressing that they were satisfied with the choices offered. This shows that the college provides adequate flexibility and variety in elective subjects. Library resources also received positive feedback: 84.4% were satisfied with the availability of newspapers, books, and magazines; though a small proportion felt the need for further enhancement of reading materials. Teaching methods and adherence to academic schedules were rated highly, with 92.3% of students satisfied with the effectiveness and timely completion of syllabus. This highlights the dedication and planning of faculty members in maintaining academic discipline and ensuring curriculum delivery. Regarding additional academic support, 63.1% of students reported that they were provided remedial, extra, or special classes along with regular teaching. However, 36.9% felt that such classes were limited or unavailable, indicating scope for strengthening remedial support, especially for slow learners and students requiring extra guidance. Strengthening remedial support for slow learners is essential, but sometimes not possible due to heavy institutional workload and extensive faculty responsibilities. Laboratory facilities were also positively rated, with 80% of respondents agreeing that the laboratories provide an ideal practical learning environment. This reflects satisfactory infrastructure for hands-on learning in science and technical subjects, though 20% indicated a need for further up gradation of equipment or space. One of the significant findings emerged in the area of modern teaching and learning tools. While 56.9% students agreed that the institution is equipped with facilities such as internet, smart classrooms, and computers, a considerable 43.1% expressed dissatisfaction. This indicates a pressing need to strengthen ICT infrastructure, improve internet connectivity, and increase the number of smart classrooms to ensure wider access to technology-enabled learning.

According to the student survey, 92.3% of students are satisfied with the manner in which house tests, workshops, and seminars are conducted. They appreciated fair evaluation, well-planned schedules, and interactive sessions. Only 7.7% expressed dissatisfaction, suggesting more workshops, diverse topics, and hands-on activities to improve engagement further. According to the survey, 95.4% of students feel that they are provided with enough opportunities to participate in co-curricular activities such as quizzes, seminars, group discussions, and workshops. Students appreciated the variety of activities that enhance learning and skills, while a small percentage suggested more frequent and diverse programs.

Overall, the feedback for 2024–25 indicates a high level of student satisfaction in key areas such as academic guidance, teaching processes, syllabus completion, library services, and laboratory facilities. However, specific areas—including remedial classes and modern digital infrastructure—require focused attention for further improvement. Strengthening ICT facilities and ensuring uniform academic support across departments will help enhance the learning environment and elevate the overall student experience at the institution.

1.5 Examination Results

- i. % of Students Passed =77.44%
- ii. % of Students with A Grade and above= 49.18%
- iii. No. of Students in University Merit= Nil

Undergraduate courses had a lower proportion of top grades, while postgraduate and professional courses showed high percentages of distinction. The results highlight the commitment of both students and faculty toward academic success, structured guidance, and effective teaching-learning practices.

These results have been compiled from the H.P. University Gazette and certified by the concerned faculty members, ensuring accuracy and authenticity. The overall performance reflects the college's dedication to quality education, academic rigor, and the holistic development of its students across all disciplines. Introduction

The institution is deeply committed to shaping responsible, aware and socially sensitive citizens by actively engaging students in community service and holistic development initiatives. To foster social responsibility and moral values among students, various programmes of social importance are conducted throughout the academic session. These include awareness rallies on pressing issues such as drug abuse and AIDS, where students hold posters, deliver messages and interact with the local community. Students also participate enthusiastically in Swachhta campaigns aimed at maintaining cleanliness in and around the campus as well as nearby public areas. The celebration of important days such as Independence Day, Republic Day, International Yoga Day, World Environment Day and other national and global observances further deepens their understanding of civic duties and social ethics. In line with its commitment to environmental conservation, the institution has adopted a land at college campus and girls hostel. Volunteers from the National Service Scheme (NSS), Rovers & Rangers (RR) and the Eco-Club regularly plant native and eco-sustainable saplings in this area. These volunteers monitor growth and undertake activities like watering, fencing and nurturing the plants, thus ensuring long-term environmental sustainability. This initiative not only contributes to ecological preservation but also instills in students a deep respect for nature and encourages them to practice environmental stewardship. The institution also prioritizes students' holistic development by broadening their competencies through cultural, academic and co-curricular engagements. Students have achieved notable success in cultural events, particularly in folk song and folk dance competitions, thereby bringing laurels to the college and promoting the rich cultural heritage of the region. Their participation in such activities helps to foster confidence, creativity and teamwork. Furthermore, the institution's NCC/NSS and Rovers & Rangers contingents actively participated in district-level Republic Day and Independence Day parades and functions, demonstrating exemplary discipline, leadership and commitment. Recognizing that physical and intellectual development are key to students' future success, the institution provides essential facilities such as a well-equipped library and a sports ground. The library serves as a vital resource centre with a wide range of books, journals and digital learning tools, supporting academic excellence. The sports ground offers ample space for physical activities, promoting fitness, teamwork, and preparation for competitive examinations that require physical eligibility. The institution upholds its responsibility towards environmental sustainability by maintaining an eco-friendly and green campus. Traditional lighting systems have been replaced with LED fixtures to reduce energy consumption and carbon footprint. Plans are underway to cultivate medicinal plants near the girls' hostel in the forest area, not only to promote biodiversity but also to introduce students to the use of traditional medicinal resources. Cleanliness drives, waste management initiatives and green landscaping further reinforce the campus's commitment towards a sustainable living environment. Through these collective efforts, the institution ensures the overall growth of its students by cultivating social awareness, environmental responsibility, cultural sensitivity and academic proficiency, thereby preparing them to become responsible future leaders and contributors to society.

Abstract

The paper attempts to discuss the impact of Taliban Empire since its inception as a political power in Afghanistan and its aftermath ramifications on Muslim ruling states. This paper deals with to investigate the meaning of Talibanisation of Central Asia through incorporation of various practices pertaining to Taliban. The term 'Talibanisation' denotes the process through which the ideological and political model of the Taliban—a military Islamic group that emerged in Afghanistan in the 1990s—spreads to other regions. This phenomenon has become increasingly relevant in Central Asia, a region characterised by its Muslim-majority population, complex geopolitics, and strategic geopolitical significance. Talibanisation of Central Asia refers to the influence of Taliban ideology and practices on Muslim majority countries in the region. This paper examines the ideological significance and implications for Central Asia. The analysis highlights the ways in which Taliban-inspired movements have emerged and the varying degrees of influence they exert in these countries. It also addresses the geopolitical implications of Talibanisation, considering both internal dynamics and external relations. This paper provides an overview of the historical, ideological, and ideological background of the Taliban in Afghanistan, focusing on its implications for the region's stability and international relations.

Historical and Ideological Background of the Taliban

Before making intent for this study, a brief historical and ideological overview of the Taliban in Afghanistan is required for contextualising the study of the subject. The Taliban emerged in the mid-1990s in Afghanistan, founded by Mullah Mohammad Omar and composed primarily of Pashtun students (Talibs) from religious seminaries. Their ideology is rooted in a strict interpretation of Shariah Islam, particularly the Deobandi school of thought, which emphasises a conservative and austere form of Islamic law (Sharia). The Taliban's governance style in Afghanistan from 1996 to 2001 and during their resurgence after 2021, characterised their rule in Afghanistan from 1996 to 2001 and during their resurgence after 2021. Central to Taliban ideology is the concept of an Islamic state governed by Shariah, which emphasises their approach to political authority and social governance. Their interpretation of Islam is not only a religious doctrine but also a political tool aimed at legitimizing their authority and mobilizing support.

Influence of Taliban Ideology in Central Asia

1. Spreading Fundamentalism: The spread of Taliban ideology has been linked to the rise of various extremist movements in Central Asia. Organizations such as the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan (IMU) and the Islamic Renaissance Party of Tajikistan (IRPT) have drawn inspiration from the Taliban's model of governance and their radical interpretation of Islam. These groups have managed to establish their own versions of government installations and military personnel, and have sought to establish their own versions of Islamic law.

2. Political Movements: In addition to violent extremism, Taliban ideology has also influenced political movements in Central Asia. In countries like Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan, there have been movements that advocate for a more conservative interpretation of Islam, promoting Taliban principles. These movements often challenge existing political systems and demand greater religious freedom and decentralization.

3. Radicalization and Recruitment: Taliban ideology has also influenced recruitment and radicalization efforts in Central Asia. In some cases, they have been able to mobilize support and challenge local authorities, while in others, they remain marginalized due to strong government responses and societal resistance.

Tebuconazole induced oxidative stress and histopathological alterations in muscle of Cyprinus carpio L.: Protective efficacy of propolis as a natural antioxidant

Yashwant Rana* and Sushma Sharma*

Department of Biosciences, Himachal Pradesh University, Shimla-05, India

ABSTRACT: This study investigated tebuconazole-induced oxidative stress and muscle toxicity in Cyprinus carpio, assessing biochemical, enzymatic, and histopathological parameters. Fish exposed to sublethal TBZ concentrations (6.47 µM and 6.95 µM) for 30 days showed significant reductions in protein, lipid, SOD, GST, GR, and a biphasic CAT response, alongside elevated free amino acids, GR, and AChE activity, indicating redox imbalance and neuromuscular disruption. Muscle histology revealed progressive degeneration. Propolis supplementation markedly reversed these alterations, restoring biochemical and enzymatic balance and preserving muscle architecture. Findings highlight propolis as a promising intervention against pesticide-induced aquatic toxicity.

Keywords: Tebuconazole, oxidative stress, propolis, antioxidant.

Introduction

With the global population rising rapidly, our food systems are facing mounting pressure. By 2050, agricultural production must increase substantially to meet the growing demand for food [1]. Agriculture, which remains the backbone of food security, now struggles under a host of challenges: shrinking arable land, degrading soil quality, rising pest resistance, labour shortages, and unpredictable climate patterns [2]. In response, modern farming practices have leaned heavily on synthetic agrochemicals, especially pesticides, to sustain crop yields [3]. While these chemicals have proven effective in boosting productivity, their extensive use over the past two decades has also triggered serious concerns regarding environmental safety and human health. Alarmingly, nearly 60% of global agricultural land, about 2.45 million km², is now contaminated with pesticide residues [4]. At the same time, aquatic ecosystems in regions like South Africa, China, India, Australia, and Argentina are reporting elevated levels of pesticide contamination [4]. Although pesticides play a key role in safeguarding crops [5], they are also increasingly implicated in widespread environmental degradation. Their chemical residues allow them to persist in both land and water environments, where they may disrupt critical ecological processes. One of the main ways these substances enter freshwater systems, through runoff and leaching, is by contaminating water bodies [6]. One such pesticide is tebuconazole (TBZ), widely used triazole fungicide known for its effectiveness against fungal infections in crops such as cereals, vegetables, and fruits [6,9]. TBZ is particularly concerning due to its long environmental half-life, ranging from 300 to 600 days in soil and its high solubility in water, which facilitates its movement into nearby aquatic systems via agricultural runoff [7]. Studies have also detected TBZ in surface waters at concentrations between 0.6 and 200 µg/L [8]. Growing evidence indicates that TBZ is toxic to non-target aquatic organisms. Studies have shown that it can disrupt thyroid function [11], delay development [12], cause genetic damage [13], impair neurological health [14], and negatively affect reproduction [15]. However, despite the body of research, there remains limited understanding of how TBZ impacts fish muscle tissue, a vital system essential for locomotion, respiration, and circulation [16].

Muscle tissue is highly sensitive to environmental pollutants, particularly through oxidative stress, a key mechanism in TBZ-induced toxicity. This occurs when the overproduction of reactive oxygen species (ROS) overwhelms the body's natural antioxidant defenses. Normally, enzymes such as superoxide dismutase (SOD), catalase (CAT), glutathione peroxidase (GPx), and glutathione S-transferase (GST) work together to neutralize ROS and protect cells from damage [9]. When these defenses falter under chemical stress, it can lead to lipid peroxidation, protein carbonylation, and deterioration of muscle integrity [10]. Because of their ecological significance and sensitivity to waterborne toxins, fish are commonly used as model organisms in environmental toxicology [17]. In the present study, Cyprinus carpio (common carp) was selected due to its ecological and economic value, widespread distribution, and vulnerability to pesticide-induced oxidative stress. As a bottom-dwelling species, it is particularly prone to absorbing pollutants from the sediment. Propolis, a natural resinous substance produced by bees, has been shown to have antioxidant properties. The use of natural substances to mitigate the toxic effects of synthetic chemicals is a promising approach. Propolis, a substance collected by honeybees from plant exudates—has gained attention for its strong antioxidant, anti-inflammatory, and tissue-healing properties [18]. Rich in flavonoids and phenolic acids, propolis can help neutralize free radicals, reduce oxidative stress, and protect cells from damage [19]. Previous studies have shown that propolis can reduce oxidative stress and protect cells from oxidative injury [19]. Previous studies have shown that propolis can reduce oxidative stress and protect cells from oxidative injury [19]. Although its specific protective effects against TBZ-induced toxicity remain unclear, propolis has been shown to have antioxidant properties [20]. This study, therefore, aims to evaluate the protective effects of propolis on the muscle tissue of Cyprinus carpio through detailed biochemical and histological assessments. By exploring both the extent of TBZ toxicity and the modulatory role of propolis, this research seeks to
